(c.1533 - 1585)

O sacram convivium

Editorial method:

Original partbook names, time signatures and note durations have been retained. Clefs have been modernised, with originals appearing in prefatory staves. The overall range of each part is shown in black stemless notes before the initial time signature. The pitch of the music has been lowered by a perfect fourth in deference to the chiavi alti of the source print.

Editorial accidentals appear above the stave. Ligatures are shown by continuous square brackets, coloration by interrupted square brackets.

Text and translation: All punctuation aside from the final full stop is editorial. Ditto marks in the source underlay have been expanded using italics: the original spelling of the word endings of future glorie have been expanded to ae.

*O sacrum concivium
in quo Christus sumitur recolitur memoria passionis eius
mens impletur gratia
et futurae gloriae
nobis pignus datur.
Alleluia.*

O sacred banquet
in which Christ is received,
the memory of his Passion is renewed,
the mind is filled with grace,
and a pledge of future glory to us is given.
Alleluia.

Critical note: in bar 50 of the Altus part, the second note is printed a tone too low.

Performance:

The 1565 publication is explicit in mentioning instruments on its frontispiece: an a capella rendition of this music is quite anachronistic, however convenient. Even if no melodic instruments are used, a discreet organ continuo is appropriate.

Italian choirs of Gabrieli's lifetime were populated by men and boys, though not in the current Anglican sense. Falsettists and boys performed the same lines at the same pitch, with the ATB parts being taken by high tenors, bari-tenors and low basses respectively. Later on in the century, the use of castrati on top lines became increasingly common. As 16th century vocal ranges were defined differently than their modern counterparts, the ranges given at the start of the piece should be more expressive than a somewhat arbitrary 'SATB' style description.
