Quæramus cum pastóribus verbum incarnátum;
cantémus cum homínibus regem sæculórum, noé, noé.
Quod tu vides in stábulo? Jesum natum de Vírgine.
Quid audis in præsepío? Ángelus cum cármine,
et pastóres dicéntes: noé, noé.

Ubi pascas, ubi cubes?
Dic, si ploras, aut si rides:
te rogámus, Rex Christe, noé, noé.
Cibus est lac virgíneum, lectus durum præsepium, cármina sunt lácrimæ, noé, noé.

*Let us seek with the shepherds the word incarnate;
let us sing with mankind to the King of the ages, noël, noël.
What do you see in the stable? Jesus, born of the Virgin.
What do you hear in the manger? Angels with a song, and shepherds saying: noël, noël.*

*Where do you eat, where do you sleep?
Tell us if you weep or smile:
we ask you, Christ the King, noël, noël.
My food is virgin milk, my bed a hard manger,
my songs are tears, noël, noël.*

Evidence of the popularity of Mouton's setting of this anonymous Christmastide text can be found in its appearance in at least thirty 16th-century manuscripts — outside of the composer's native France, it has been found in manuscripts across Europe, from Modena to Edinburgh, from Madrid to Nürnberg. It even reached the New World, appearing in a hand-copied choir book in 16th-century Guatemala. Mouton's motet also formed the basis of parody masses by Adrian Willaert (who reputedly studied under Mouton in Paris in about 1510), Gasparo Alberti, and Cristóbal de Morales.

Editorial Notes:

Such a rich variety of sources is a mixed blessing, as it gives rise to inevitable disagreement that the modern editor must attempt to resolve. In addition to the two sources acknowledged at the head of this edition (respectively, the earliest hand-copied and earliest published source with all voice parts available), a further seven sources were consulted. The full list of consulted sources is provided below. The majority of non-concordances are relatively minor rhythmic variations, and none is common to more than three sources. The only significant non-concordance appears solely in the 1529 publication from the otherwise-reliable publishing house of Pierre Attaignant: in effect, the second semibreve of m.39 is omitted entirely. As this omission creates no obvious harmonic, melodic or rhythmic problem, it may have gone unnoticed in partbook performance; however, barlines in modern notation reveal the problem — some editions evidently based on this source have found it necessary to include a three-beat bar somewhere in the prima pars to compensate for the missing beat. That this non-concordance is erroneous is further supported by the fact that it appears in no other source.

Editorial accidentals are indicated above the note. Original note values are retained: thus, consistent with 16th-century convention, the C mensuration sign and its modern-equivalent C time signature signify a semibreve tactus. Bar lines are added only to aid reading and direction: 'strong' and 'weak' beats implied by their position should never take precedence over phrasing or word stress. Ligatures in the source are acknowledged with overarching square brackets. Word underlay reflects editorial judgment and has been freely adjusted, given the ambiguity of the sources. This edition is based on the word underlay of Attaignant's 1529 partbooks: editorial addition or reiteration of words not explicit in that source is indicated in italic.
