

Six Choral Songs (1864)

No. 5.

The Indian Maid

John L. Hatton

(1809-1886)

John Liptrot Hatton (1809-1886) was born in Liverpool. He received a rudimentary music education as a child, but was essentially a self-taught musician. He held several appointments as organist in Liverpool and appeared as an actor on the Liverpool stage. He relocated to London in 1832 as a member of Macready's company at Drury Lane and began to establish himself as a composer. His first operetta, "Queen of the Thames", was successful in 1844; he then went to Vienna and brought out his opera "Pascal Bruno." He wrote several songs on his return to England and appeared at the Hereford festival as a singer. He also undertook piano concert tours at this time. From 1848 to 1850 he was in America, giving public and private concerts in New York City. Notably, in 1848, he shared the stage in Pittsburgh, PA with Stephen C. Foster. Returning to England, he became conductor of the Glee and Madrigal Union and director of music at the Princess's Theatre, London. He wrote operas, cantatas, incidental music, anthems, cathedral pieces, and many songs. His part-songs were regarded as some of the best of the genre. Hatton's daughter, Frances J. Hatton, emigrated to Canada in 1869, where she became a respected composer and the singing instructor at the Hellmuth Ladies College in London, Ontario.

A dusky maid, with ebon hair,
Sits by the Ganges river;
With hope and fear her bosom heaves,
Her parted lips they quiver.
A finer light is in her eye,
Than that whose fitful shining
Now thrills her soul with sudden joy,
Now sets it to repining!
And as the river flows along,
She softly sings her mystic song.

For on the Ganges' sacred stream,
Her fateful lamp is floating,
And as it flames, or as it dies,
Shall be her lover's doating.
A thousand stars are in the sky,
Like gems on hidden fingers:
But eye unused to upward gaze,
On lurid light still lingers!
And as the river flows along,
She softly sings her mystic song.

Oh, not for us, with idle thought,
To scorn the Indian maiden;
We too may watch our earthen lamps,
With lotus wreathed and laden!
But when— through tears— we see them quenched,
And round us sorrows cluster,
'Tis well the beacon stars glow on,
With heav'n-kindled lustre!
And well Life's river flowing by,
Still flows beneath a starry sky!

Camilla Dufour Toulmin Crosland (1812-1895)

NOTE FROM ORIGINAL NOVELLO PUBLICATION: "According to a well-known superstition, the Hindoo maiden floats her lamp upon the Ganges, and, murmuring a musical incantation, draws an augury of her destiny from the fate of the light."
